Equipment leasing is a loan in which the lender buys and owns equipment and then “rents” it to a business at a flat monthly rate for a specified number of months at the end of the lease, the business may purchase the equipment for its fair market value (or a fixed or predetermined amount), continue leasing, lease new equipment or return it.

Any business at any stage of development can benefit greatly from leasing. A start-up business with no revenues can enjoy the ease and feasibility of “small ticket” leases, those of $100,000 or less.

If you can dream it, we can lease it. Nothing's too small or too large. From tractors to street sweepers to cameras or software.

SUPPLY:

Abundant, of the billions of dollars individual and institutional investors pour into the capital markets each month, a good hunk finds its way to leasing companies that use these funds to purchase equipment on behalf of small businesses. With more and more money flowing into the markets, leasing companies are flush with capital. As a result, they are eager to do business and respond to competition with lower monthly rates.

BEST USE:

Financing equipment purchases. Leasing can also finance the soft costs often associated with equipment purchases, such as installation and training services.

COSTS:

Lease financing is generally more easily obtained. Equipment leasing improves a company's cash flow. With leasing, there is no need for significant cash outlays as opposed to an equipment purchase, which generally requires a large down payment.
